

Huskers Brand Pokes, 54-7

STILLWATER, Okla. — It was a perfect November afternoon in Stillwater — almost too perfect for a branding party.

Nebraska's highly-ranked Cornhuskers had one anyway, pinning Oklahoma State with its worse loss in 25 years at Lewis Field. The Cowboys, making their first regional television appearance since 1977, were stunned, 54-7.

Nebraska set the tone early against a defense that came into the game ranked No. 2 overall in the NCAA. The Huskers scored on their first three offensive possessions, driving 86 yards for their first touchdown, 85 yards for their second touchdown, then turning Jimmy Williams' first collegiate interception into a 27-yard Eddie Neil field goal.

Although OSU remained in 17-0 contention at halftime, Williams delivered his second interception in the first minute of the second half. The Huskers needed to drive only 13 yards for their third touchdown and the rout was on.

Nebraska's best previous scoring effort in Lewis Field was a 41-point explosion by the 1971 national championship team.

Quarterback Turner Gill continued to flash his brilliance, scoring NU's first two touchdowns, then passing to tight end Mitch Krenk for the third.

Nebraska's next three third-quarter touchdowns were homerun plays — a 64-yard run by Roger Craig, a 93-yard kickoff return by Mike Rozier and a 32-yard pass from Mark Mauer to Todd Brown.

While Craig rushed for 121 yards and Rozier added 102, the Black Shirts checked OSU to 41 yards on the ground. They also intercepted six Cowboy passes to remain the only unbeaten, untied team in the Big Eight standings.

Roger Craig has his feet high in the air, but the ball not quite over the goalline on this scoring bid.

Roger Craig goes airborne again, but fails to score — this time.

Todd Brown has the ball and daylight as he completes a 32-yard touchdown pass play from Mark Mauer.

Doug Wilkening fights for extra yardage where yardage is toughest.

Tony Felici and Jeff Merrell put the hurt on OSU quarterback John Doerner, and Henry Waechter closes in on the fun.

Lockerroom Chatter

The Huskers

Tom Osborne, head coach — "I was very surprised the way the game went. I was ready for a tight, tough, defensive game. I thought we would win if we played well, but I was expecting something more like 14-0. I was pleased but surprised. I had no idea we could score 30 points against them, let alone 50 some against the (OSU) defensive team we had been seeing on film. I think because of the way Oklahoma State had been playing to this point, it might have been our best offensive game."

Turner Gill, quarterback — "That probably took a little hunk out of them. Nobody had ever done it on them all year. That probably shocked them. It wasn't really easy. They were tough in the first half. We had a lot of chances in the first half, but we made a lot of mistakes. We hung in there tough, came back in the second half, and put it on them. We can run on anybody."

Tony Felici, defensive end — "Every time I looked up, somebody had an interception. I felt left out. Our defense still played a lot better than their defense, and their defense had the best statistics and most of the advance publicity."

Jimmy Williams, defensive end — "I love to play against Oklahoma State because it's always going to be a physical game. Our game plan is usually simple, to allow us to be more aggressive, and so all you have to do is go out there and play what little technique you're playing and make something happen. Now that I know what it's like to get an interception, I want more. It's like getting on a streak of sacking the quarterback. You get that feeling. You want to be around the ball."

Mike Rozier, I-back — "They really hadn't played anybody, not like us, anyway, and we wanted to show them what it was like to play against the best. Penn State was tougher than they were (defensively). I think anybody could have scored on them."

Dan Hurley, offensive tackle — "I've got to give Oklahoma State a little credit for the second quarter. They stopped us down deep. We had them on the hook and let them off. At halftime, Coach Osborne got on us a little bit and said to go play the third quarter like we did the first quarter."

The Cowboys

Jimmy Johnson, head coach — "We had a little bit of jitters there in the first part of the game. They took it right down on us. Then we made some mistakes, and they scored again. It was all downhill from that point on. Nebraska has a great football team. They just physically whipped us throughout the game. We got a half-dozen guys hurt in the first half, who didn't even come back out and play in the second half. It's just an empty feeling to go out there and know that you're up against a brick wall."

Pete DeClementi, strong safety — "We knew they would try to run it at us. There is not enough I can say about their offense. In one word, Great! They are awesome. They're definitely the best we've played against all year. Turner Gill is a gifted quarterback. Talent-wise, he's the best I've seen this year. Their whole offense ran real well."

Ron Ingram, wingback — "We didn't think they'd be as tough as they were. They have the best defense we've faced all year. Their offense doesn't make mistakes. It seemed like everything they did, they made it work. We knew we were going to have to throw the ball to stay in the game, but Nebraska showed they have a real fine football team."

Gary Chachere, defensive tackle — "They have a great team. Nebraska will run the same play at you six times, but each time they'll have a little different blocking scheme and finally they'll get that fraction of a little edge. You have to give them credit."

Mike Green, linebacker — "We knew Nebraska had a real fine football team. They played excellent ball on offense. We had a couple of let-downs on defense that busted the game wide open. Too many times we had breakdowns and gave up the big play. That costs a lot."

James Evans, tailback — "We knew Nebraska had a good defense, and we had to go out and try to play our best against it. Our game plan was, we were going to pass a little on them and try to mix it up and keep them off balance."

Tim Moreland

sports director, KFOR Radio, Lincoln

"The Husker defense, after a shaky start in September, has become as steady as a rock. I doubt if Iowa State will be able to do much offensively. Nebraska's offense, statistically, has been awesome, but has been less consistent than I think Tom Osborne would like to have it. Because of that, I'll say Nebraska 27, Iowa State 13. But if the offense we saw in the Oklahoma State game shows up Saturday, put a '1' in front of the 27 and stock up on suntan oil."

Lee Barfknecht

Omaha World Herald

"Injuries and the giddiness of being in the rarefied air of the upper division of the Big Eight has finally caught up with the Cyclones. With human land rover Dwayne Crutchfield at half speed, the Cyclones likewise move at half speed, which isn't enough when you're in a race with a thoroughbred like Nebraska. Even if Crutchfield is at full strength, it probably won't matter, since power backs rarely pose the problem that Oklahoma-style jitterbugs pose for the Huskers. Nebraska 31, Iowa State 10."

Buck Turnbull

Des Moines Register

"It's too bad injuries have hit the Cyclones so hard. The Iowa State team that started the season will not be the one playing in Lincoln Saturday. The slide has been swift. Two weeks ago, Iowa State was ranked 10th and 11th in the country and ABC gave every indication it was going to televise the Nebraska-Iowa State game. Losses to K-State and Kansas are quite a comedown for a team that was sailing at 5-1-1. Meanwhile, since Turner Gill has taken over at Nebraska, the Huskers now look like a team that can finish in the top four or five in the country. If they were playing Clemson tomorrow, I'd probably bet on the Huskers. Nebraska 35, Iowa State 10."

"Nebraska has been getting better each week as Turner Gill continues to gain valuable experience. Iowa State has tailed off after an impressive start. Dwayne Crutchfield, following a string of 100-yard games, has failed to reach that magic mark the last two weeks. The Black Shirts will make it three straight. Nebraska 35, Iowa State 7."

"It's becoming obvious. While the other seven Big Eight teams (including Oklahoma) struggle for an identity, Nebraska looks like the champion. The Cornhuskers are putting it all together — an explosive offense, a stingy defense and vastly improved kicking game. We believe Tom Osborne's first undisputed Big Eight championship is just around the corner. Oh, for that moon over Miami....Nebraska 34, Iowa State 6."

Coach Osborne's Evaluation

Iowa State's back-to-back losses to Kansas State (10-7) and Kansas (24-11) haven't allowed Tom Osborne to relax as he prepares his Nebraska football team for Saturday's Big Eight Conference battle with the 5-3-1 Cyclones. "You can get a false sense of security about them," Nebraska's head coach said.

Osborne remembers an Iowa State team which opened with three straight victories, tied Oklahoma and moved into the nation's Top 10. He points to the Cyclones' 34-13 victory over Missouri — "That's worse than we beat Missouri," he said — and notes that Iowa State probably will do as good a job of combining running and passing in its offense as any team Nebraska plays this season.

"I know they're a capable football team, and early in the season they looked awfully strong. I really don't know what their problem is now," said Osborne.

Whatever it is, you won't find it on paper. Iowa State has "a big offensive line," anchored by juniors Ted Clapper (6-5, 274) and Karl Nelson (6-6, 262), both veteran starters; it has 246-pound tailback Dwayne Crutchfield, who already has rushed for 1,065 yards this season; and, at quarterback, it has a healthy John Quinn, who was bothered by shoulder problems and couldn't pass effectively when Nebraska defeated the Cyclones 35-0 last season in Ames.

"The big difference this year is Quinn's ability to throw the ball. They have a good passing game," Osborne said. Quinn has completed over 55 percent of his passes this season to complement the hard running of Crutchfield, who entered last Saturday's game with Kansas ranked 11th in the nation in rushing.

Crutchfield has scored 15 touchdowns this season. The senior from Cincinnati, Ohio, has been slowed in recent weeks with ankle and neck problems, but he should challenge a Nebraska defense which finally yielded a touchdown to Oklahoma State after putting together 22 consecutive quarters without allowing an opponent to cross the Cornhusker goalline. "There's nothing we can do about it. We'll just have to go out and start another," defensive tackle Toby Williams said of the end of the string.

The previous week, against Kansas, Nebraska's defense became the first since 1910 to hold five straight opponents without a touchdown.

The Cornhusker defenders maintained then that they hadn't been thinking about the string. Against Oklahoma State, however, "I think for the first time since the streak has been going, we were really concerned about it. We went out there and played for a shutout, I think, but I don't think we played as emotionally as we could," said defensive end and co-captain Jimmy Williams.

"When it happened as a result of penalties and big plays, I don't think there was a letdown in morale or anything. It was bound to happen sooner or later," Williams said. A grabbing-the-facemask penalty and a pass interference call helped Oklahoma State's 11-play, 80-yard drive along.

Osborne acknowledged that Nebraska had an occasional defensive lapse against the Cowboys, but "on the other hand, we came up with seven turnovers, some of which were caused," he said.

"We held them (the Cowboys) down; up until the blocked kick, our kicking game was good; we were one-for-one on field goals; and we had the long kickoff return for a touchdown. But the thing that was most impressive was moving the ball like we did because I felt, going into the game, the strongest part of their team was defense."

Both of Nebraska's I-backs, Roger Craig and Mike Rozier, rushed for more than 100 yards on an afternoon when the Cornhuskers generated 425 yards on the ground against a Cowboy defense which went into the game ranked third in the nation in rushing defense. Oklahoma State had allowed an average of only 67.7 yards per game on the ground.

Nebraska's sixth straight victory kept the Cornhuskers the only undefeated and untied team in Big Eight play. After the 54-7 drubbing of Oklahoma State, the Cornhuskers listened to the closing minutes of Oklahoma's narrow 28-21 escape of Kansas State in Manhattan, Kansas.

With Iowa State beginning to falter down the stretch, Oklahoma now appears to be Nebraska's main challenge in the race for the conference championship. "I told the players right after our game (with OSU) that I didn't want them getting jubilant over what somebody else was doing," said Osborne. "I just want them thinking about playing well themselves in their last two games. We can't depend on anything."

Osborne's attention is riveted to the Iowa State team which showed itself in the early season, and defeated Iowa, 23-12, not the Cyclones who lost to San Diego State, 52-31. "There's no way we can play well against Iowa State if we're thinking about Oklahoma," he said.

Injury Report

Nebraska suffered only two significant injuries in last Saturday's 54-7 victory over Oklahoma State, both to offensive players.

Quarterback Turner Gill suffered bruised ribs, after running for two touchdowns and completing 8-of-10 passes for 89 yards and one touchdown, and tight end Jamle Williams suffered a knee sprain on the opening kickoff.

NU head coach Tom Osborne said Williams is the most questionable for this week's final home game with Iowa State.

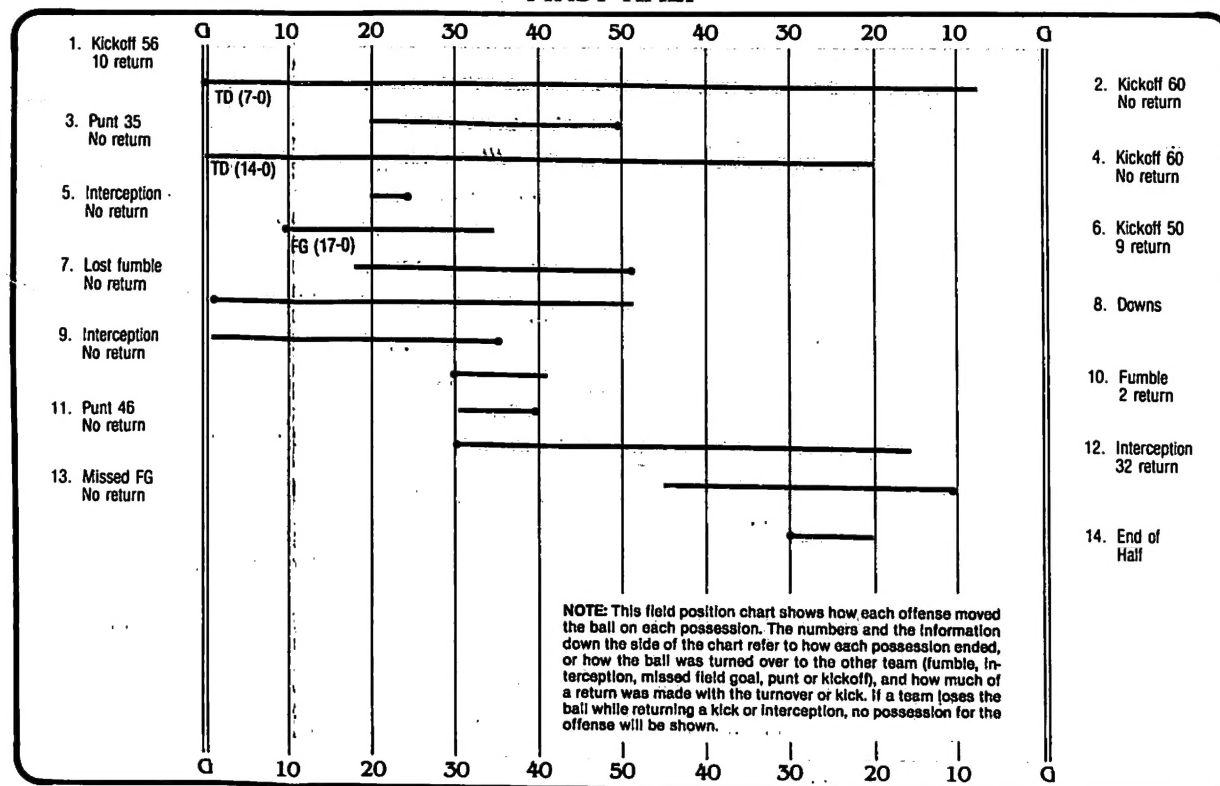

Back-up fullback Mark Moravec, who did not make the trip to Oklahoma State, is expected to return to action this week. Moravec has been sidelined with a shoulder injury.
